GEISHA GIRL IN TOKYO SAVED BY KIND AMERICAN

Otto C. Miller, Engineer, Finds Note Telling of Plight and He Buys Her Freedom.

THEN AIDS SWEETHEART
Lends Him Money to Buy Her as Bride From Parents and Then Sails for U. S.

By Universal Service.
TOKYO, Feb. 11.—The primrose path of geishadom usually leads foreigners who tread it toward a canceled contract and a second-class passage home, but the latest Tokyo tale of the contacts between the Western world and the world where the geisha glitters is of a young American's redemption of a geisha.

Otto C. Miller, installation engineer of an American company which was erecting a new plant for a Japanese glass-making firm, was entertained at a farewell dinner by a business friend at the Maruyama, the principal tea-house of Shimonoseki.

Among the geishas brought in to entertain the guests was a beautiful girl, whose look of apparent distress attracted the young American. Her sad face haunted him, and he returned to the tea-house another night. On a second visit he observed that when no one was looking Sancho-san took a letter from her pocket and, after reading it, burst into tears.

Sancho-san, it seemed, seeing the poverty of her parents, had proposed to her mother that she should be placed in a geisha house, so that she might support her family. The mother consented, with tears, and on condition that the advances of patrons were not to cross the line that divides amusement from vice. That was three years ago, when Sancho-san was seventeen years old.

Inquiries at the home confirmed the girl's story. The family were living in one room, 12x8, and were on the verge of starvation. The American determined to rescue the girl, and negotiations with the geisha house "madam" were started through a third party.

When a man proposes to "redeem" a geisha, that is, pay her debts to the keeper of the house of which she is a member, it is usually with a view of making her his "No. 2 wife." Sancho-san demurred to being redeemed by a foreigner, but joyfully consented when assured that the motives of the transaction were purely philanthropic.

"What's the use of a man's having ideals," says Miller, "if he can't act on them when he meets a case like this?" Sancho-san's debt, amounting to 3,000 yen (nearly $2,000), was paid, and she returned to her family. Helps Them to Wed.

To complete the romance a lover turned up in the person of a poor but honest young rice broker. They had been engaged for eighteen months, hoping to get married whenever the young man could save enough to buy his sweetheart off, but the day seemed distant.

Miller went to see the lover, and, as he says, "put him through the third degree," which is American for a severe cross-examination. He seemed a steady, hardworking young fellow. Miller thought they could not do better than get married, and so it has been settled.

A small house is being furnished in the long town of Shimonoseki, where the ocean liners pass through the straits, and Sancho-san is looking forward to her marriage with the man she loves. Miller left for Charlestown, W. Va., to join his wife.
